

Claims: I claim:

A method of registering data over the Internet where said data will be typed and displayed in one-line textbox and separated by a slash (/) or another character like * or #, to distinguish the category of said data entered; such process can be implemented by using a software apparatus that will be a plug-in to be used into web sites and wireless devices, the method consist of:

- a) displaying the category's titles of said entry data above the text box to guide the user submits the related information to said title;
- b) entering said entry data in the text box;
- c) skipping the present title by pressing twice the separator;
- d) editing the said data at any time by cursor movement before submitting;
- e) pressing a button or hitting the Enter key to submit the entry data to a server;

- f) storing said data in a database;
- e) Process further including the same design, a single text box to sign in or login, entering username and password, which will be not display on the screen as shown in FIG 2;
- f) Process further including submitting, and securing credit card information, or payment methods;
- h) Process further including other processes that need submitting data.
- i) Process further including the plug-in design regarding to the shape, length, color, size, animation or sound to be used in the present invention;
- j) Process further including the software or technology to implement this method;

k) Process further including a server to collect data and share said between websites allowing users to login to different websites using the same method, one-line registration, without registering again.

5